James -

Well, here's wishing a great guy a lot of luck in the future
You've been a great pal these last 3 years
I believe no one will forget all you've done for me! Even if sometimes I think you really stung, (you know what I mean) and you carry about your love-life! One of these days, James, you gonna face for one of your many chicks and abide it, I hope after your running around, up and down + get your sense back. You really a great guy though, and I wish you all the happiness a guy could have, even if sometimes you don't deserve to be happy!!
Maybe someday you'll fall for someone like I did 3 years or so ago + then you'll really be happy -
But always to my very good pal.

We dedicate this yearbook to the late Mr. Amon G. Carter because in our words and his style of writing:

Mr. Fort Worth Boosts Carterville

"From Rags to Riches" Amon Giles Carter filled the boots of a typical Horatio Alger character. Every Cowtowner knows the story of his early business venture in selling chicken sandwiches at the train station in Bowie. When the chicken supply diminished, he substituted rabbit meat.

Technicalities never bothered Amon. For $5 he became a jockey before he learned to ride.

Sticks A Fist in Every Pie

Contributions of Mr. Carter (aliases—Range Rider of the Air, The West Texan, West Texas' Top Cowhand, Range Boss of West Texas and Mr. Fort Worth) lie in five main fields. They are journalism, education, oil, aviation and civic enterprises.

Before entering the newspaper business, Mr. Carter had had some experience with selling and advertising. When the FORT WORTH STAR was born in 1906, he became the advertising manager. This is logical since he was the only one in that department.

About six weeks later when the STAR scooped its rivals on the San Francisco earthquake, Amon had a heyday. In no time this same person, who carried a sack lunch to save spending money in Dallas, was peddling the FORT WORTH STAR on the streets of Big D.

Runs Hearst Out of Business

For a while William Randolph Hearst and his morning daily, the FORT WORTH RECORD, offered a little competition. Eventually Hearst took his first defeat when he sold out to Carter. The moral of this story is "never underestimate the power of a woman—or Amon G. Carter."

As radio began to appear on the scene, Mr. Carter decided he might as well be the one to scoop himself. WBAP and WBAP-TV grew from a $300 transmitting set.

Schools Benefit From His Aid

Because he wanted children to have the advantages he missed, he gave freely to education. Five schools in particular owe Mr. Carter thanks. Carter-Riverside received mercury street lights and $50,000 for scholarships and athletics. YMCA's Camp Carter is for the use of Carter and other high school students.

To Culver Military Academy, where his son attended, he donated a 51 bell carillon and Memorial Chapel. From him TWC received a scholarship fund and band uniforms. TCU came into his good will and pocketbook when he became an avid football fan.

In gratitude TCU Stadium became Amon Carter Stadium, and the school conferred an honorary doctor's degree upon him. Texas Tech, his baby in West Texas, gave him his first honorary doctor of law degree.

"If At First You Don't Succeed"

Any true Texas millionaire has wiggled his toes in oil. But not many of them had to drill 90 dry holes before being able to do so!

"D. Green Will Tour

"Amon Cartered Again" read the headline of a Dallas editorial after Mr. Fort Worth pulled a sneaky. In the main office of Sinclair Oil Corporation Mr. Carter stood studying the map of branch offices. He spied a pin at Dallas which he ever so daintily moved to Cowtown. The big boss thought this such a cute trick that soon the southern headquarters for Sinclair was situated here.

Amon Carter was Will Rogers' favorite flying partner and best friend. Together they made Fort Worth air minded. At Mr. Rogers' death it was Mr. Carter's efforts which brought about the national memorial to his friend.

A recent city council project consecrated the area including Will Rogers' Memorial Building, the Children's Museum and the Art Museum as Amon Carter Square.

Besides his previously mentioned namesakes, Carter has been attached to the administration building and field of Greater Fort Worth International Airport. A Pullman car bears his name as does "The Amon Carter March" by Don Gillis. Fort Worth has been referred to as Cartersville.

Motto Explains Success

What made this man the success he was? Perhaps the motto hanging over his desk best answers the question.

"Most everybody can get results when kindly encouraged, but give me the man who can get there in spite of hell."

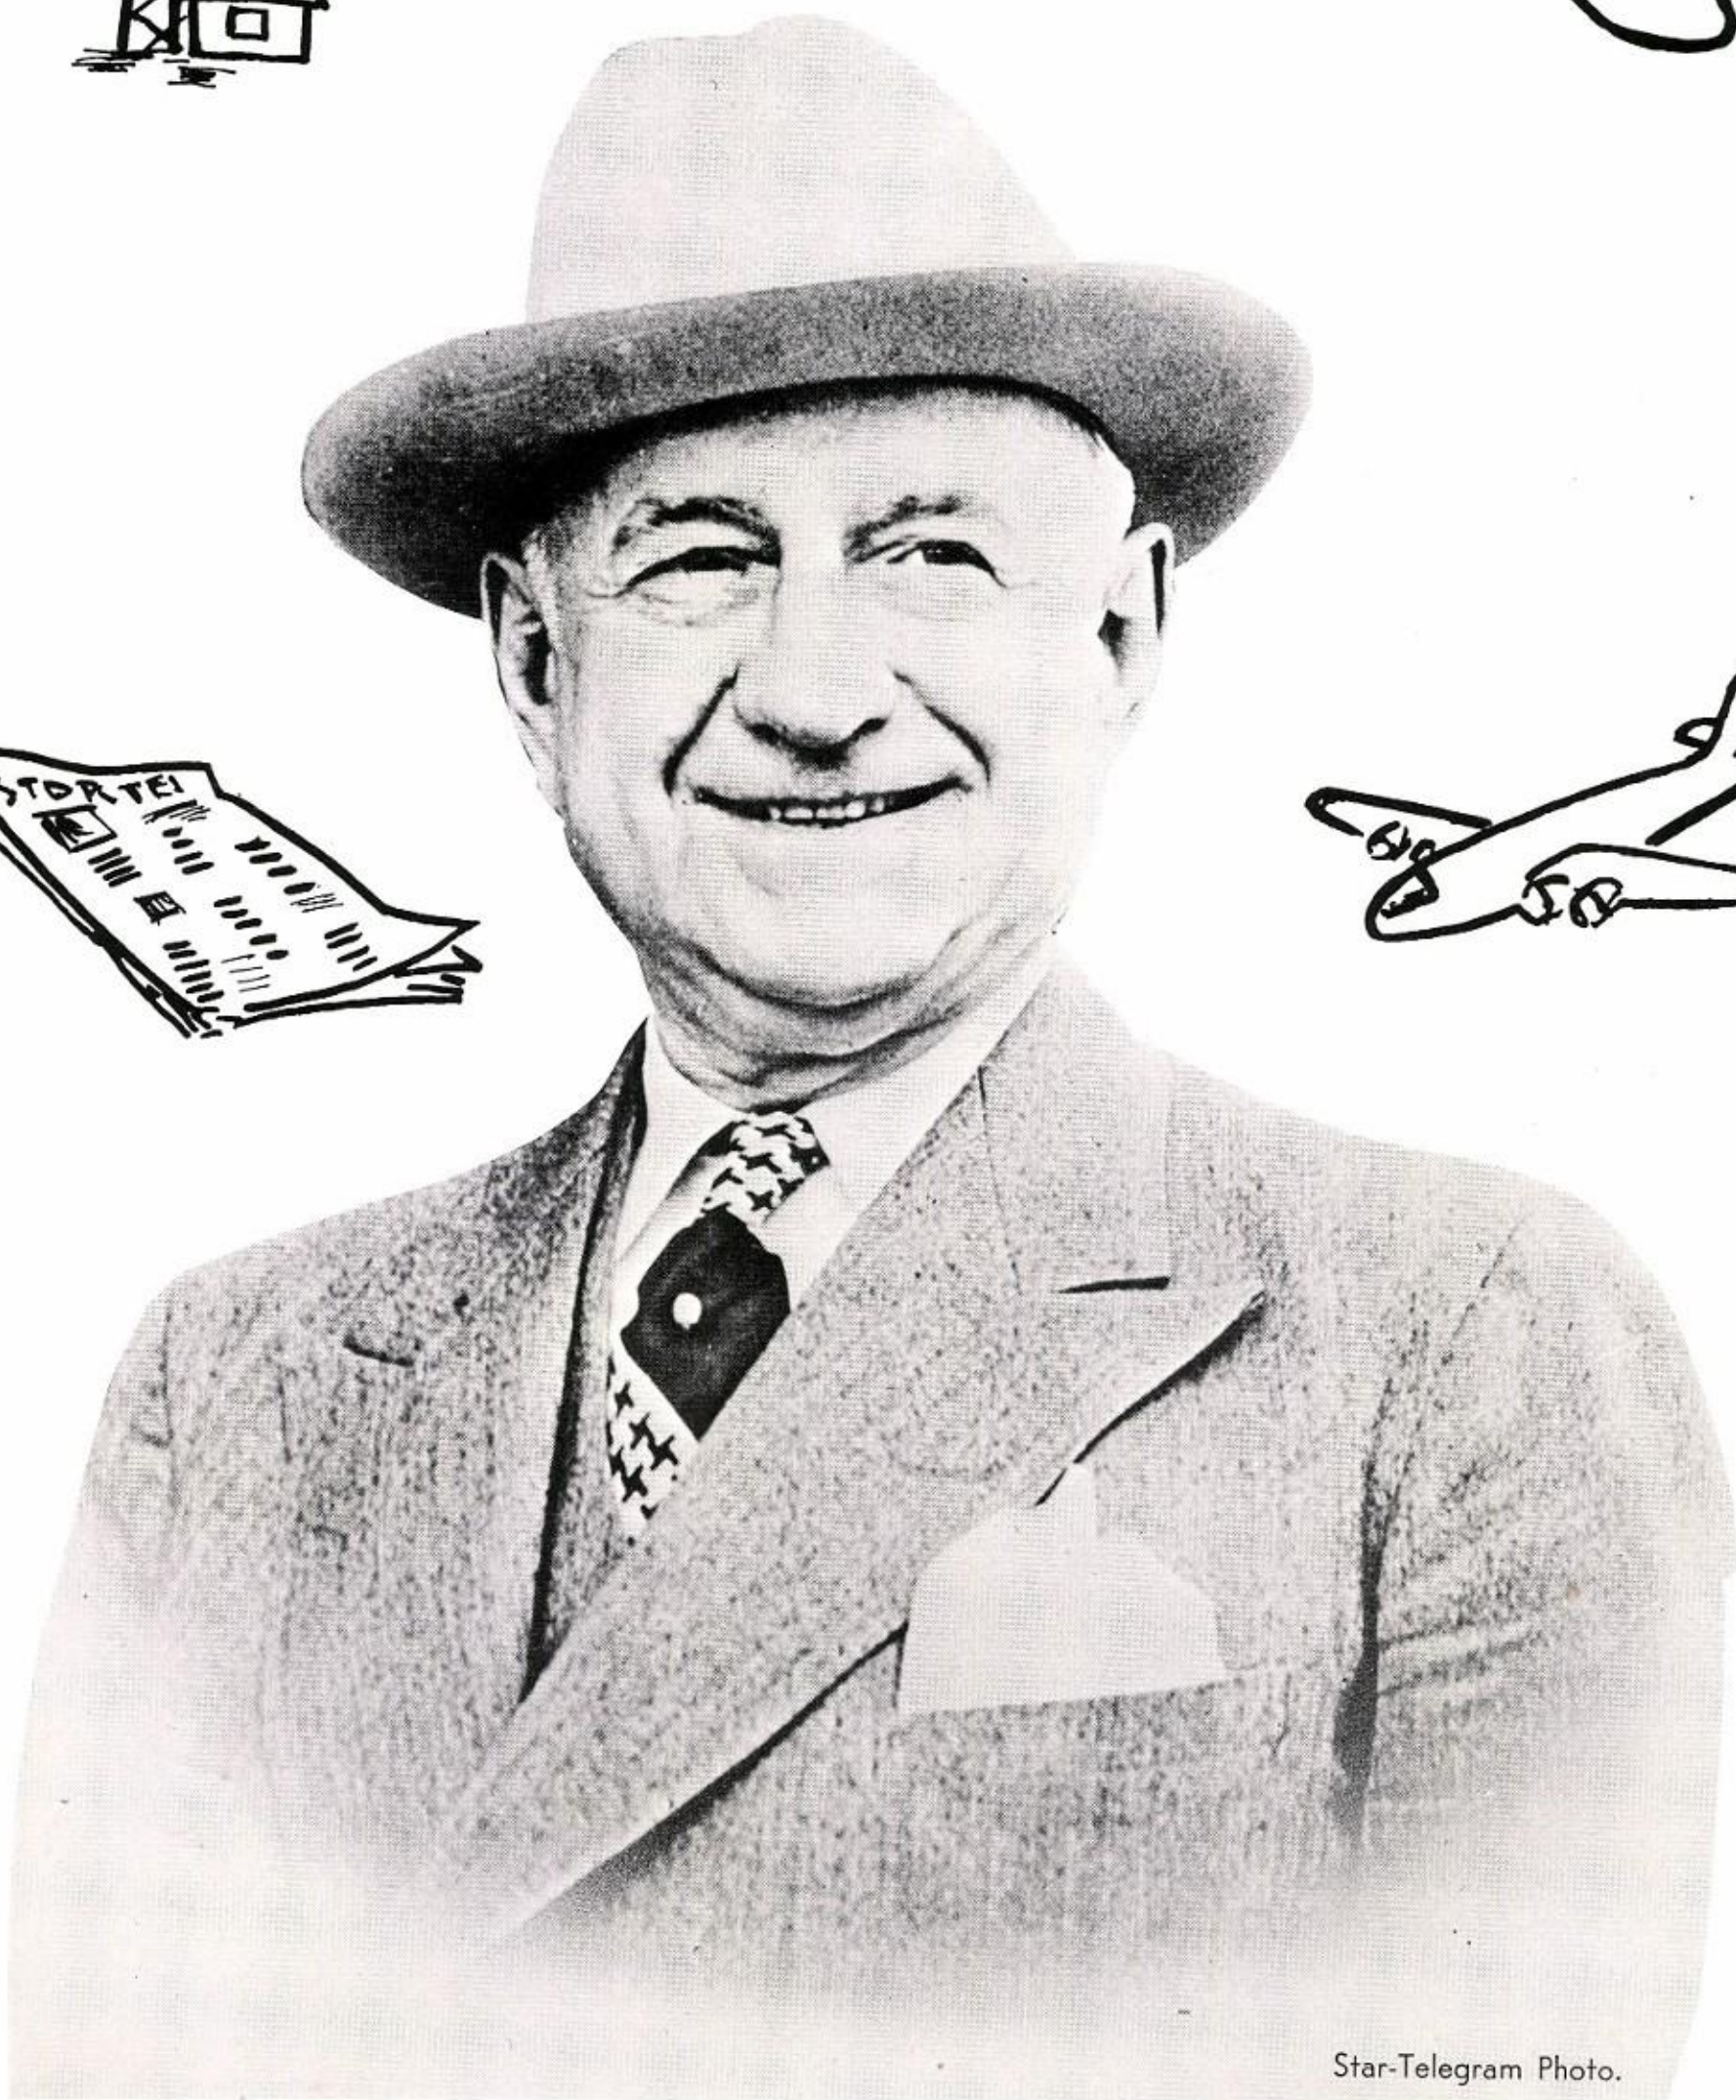

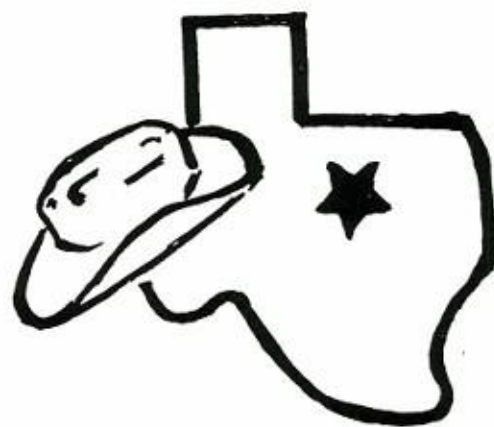

Schools Offer New Courses

Enrollment in at least three schools offering training courses of general interest to Convair San Diego employees is still possible, although in some spring semester

Mrs. R. C. Richards	parliamentarian
Mrs. C. Boulware	historian
Mrs. Fred Uridil	reporter

Mrs. C. E. Morlan, first vice-president, and Mrs. Bob Llewellyn, recording secretary, keep the records straight for the PTA. They, along with the rest of the board members, plan meetings and fund raising projects.

These moms attend school regularly (or that is on PTA days) to keep up with junior and his shenanigans. In the first picture, Mrs. Ward presides during the business meeting, and in the second picture the group enjoys a special program presented by the music department. Many of the teachers are busy holding classes, but scanning the group one can find Mr. Lindsay, Mrs. Hukill, Mrs. Carrico, and Mrs. Bright.

Mr. Joe P. Moore, superintendent, sits behind his desk and looks the part of a real "big wheel." But the fact of the matter is that he not only looks important—he is! He has the final say on anything concerning Fort Worth public schools.

Along about December the new Administration Building took life when it was moved into. These snaps show its modern appearance.

LOCAL ADM

Mr. Hague Lindsay

Mrs. Jeannette K. Bright

Mr. Jerry K. Sullivan

Mr. Lindsay smooths the feathers of Eagles, whether they be teachers or students. Contrary to what one might think, being principal doesn't exempt him from being human. Why he enjoyed the pep rally after the Paschal upset as much as anyone!

Mrs. Bright bosses girls around while a pekingese, Chicha by name, bosses her. She was even known to be late to school once because Chicha wouldn't eat. But that incident was an exception to the rule. She is usually Johnny-on-the-spot teaching an English class or counseling girls.

Erect Jerry Sullivan can give the name of almost every boy in school. Perhaps the reason boys don't find a visit to his office too horribly unpleasant is the picture of his daughter on the desk.

1. The dust flies as Terry Cox meets with the Board of Education.

ADMINISTRATION

Like mother, like daughter, Mrs. Hukill and Mrs. Yeary keep things in the family. Together they supervise their office aides.

Mrs. Hukill counts the money coming in, going out, and just passing by. She protects the books from Communism (keeps them out of the red). Privately, she sells eggs to other faculty members.

Mimeographing the tests and making out absentee lists are two of Mrs. Yeary's various and sundry jobs. Typing students admire her speed and accuracy, for on that machine she's "Gone With the Wind."

Mrs. J. C. Hukill

2. Sally and Carla are happy in their hunting grounds — the anteroom to Mrs. Bright's office.
3. General flunkies in the office are Linda Cross, Julaine Boatman, Gayle Smith, Pat Littlepage, Mary Waters, Mary Ann Brown, Sue Ballew and Margie Moore.

PROFS AND

Mrs. Mattie Mae Solon
Miss Eva Craig
Mrs. Frances Wieser

No one in school is immune to English as it should be spoken rather than American as it is spoke and literature as it should be written rather than themes as they are wrote.

English is definitely not dull in Mrs. Solon's classes. There the "Rape of the Lock" and other lesser lights are read daily and appreciated often. She keeps tab on one group of seniors.

Despite murderous attempts of pupils, Miss Craig keeps Latin alive. She amuses both her English and Latin classes with her unusual, colorful descriptions and examples. On the side she chaperones Concilium Aquilarum.

Mrs. Wieser, besides teaching English and Spanish, sponsors Las Aguilas, NHS and a daughter named Sally. Her tri-lingual vocabulary is strained when pupils say, "I forgot the assignment."

1. Author, Carol and Sam pose politely with Willy and Johnny.
2. Depend on Sallie Carter to get her assistance from gentlemen.
3. Brenda pursues Romance — in language, that is.

PRODUCTS

One of the Y-Teen sponsors, Mrs. Wehrung, trains canines and Carterites with equal thoroughness. She also has a few neat little furs—not dog, either—mink!

Miss Putman, recognized by her strap purse and Indian jewelry, has been known to wear air-conditioned slacks. She admits her red hair is a fresh paint job. Miss Putman instructs in the magnificent art of vocal combat—English, speech and dramatics.

"Sam's so cute when he gets mad," students declare behind his back, but they judiciously refer to him as Mister if he's in ear shot. Mr. Seely finds the EAGLE RECORD and English courses don't fill his time so he puts out the student directory and YUCCA YARNS and sponsors the Cub Reporters

PRODUCTS

General public complains that youth isn't getting enough science and math. Well, here it is for the taking.

Physics, trig, solid and plain — er, plane — geometry constitute Mr. Essig's teaching schedule. Together with K. O., P. W. manages the Cheerleader Club, and his popularity with CHS'ers elected him sponsor of Eagle Shufflers. He is famous for his jokes and witty tid bits of philosophy. As though Carter isn't enough for him, he holds evening classes at TCU.

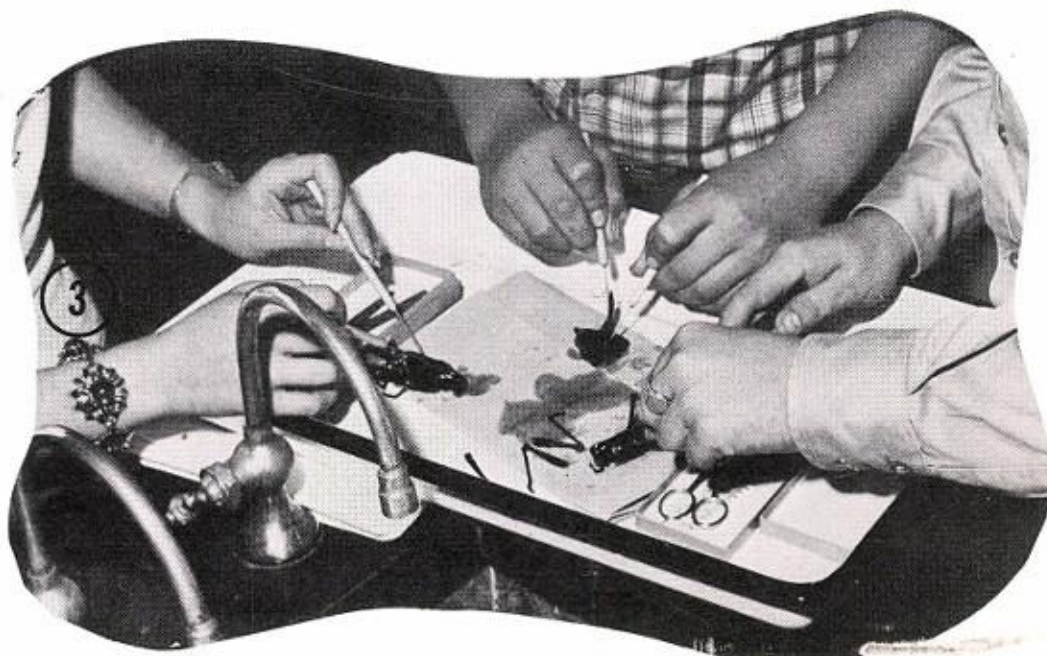

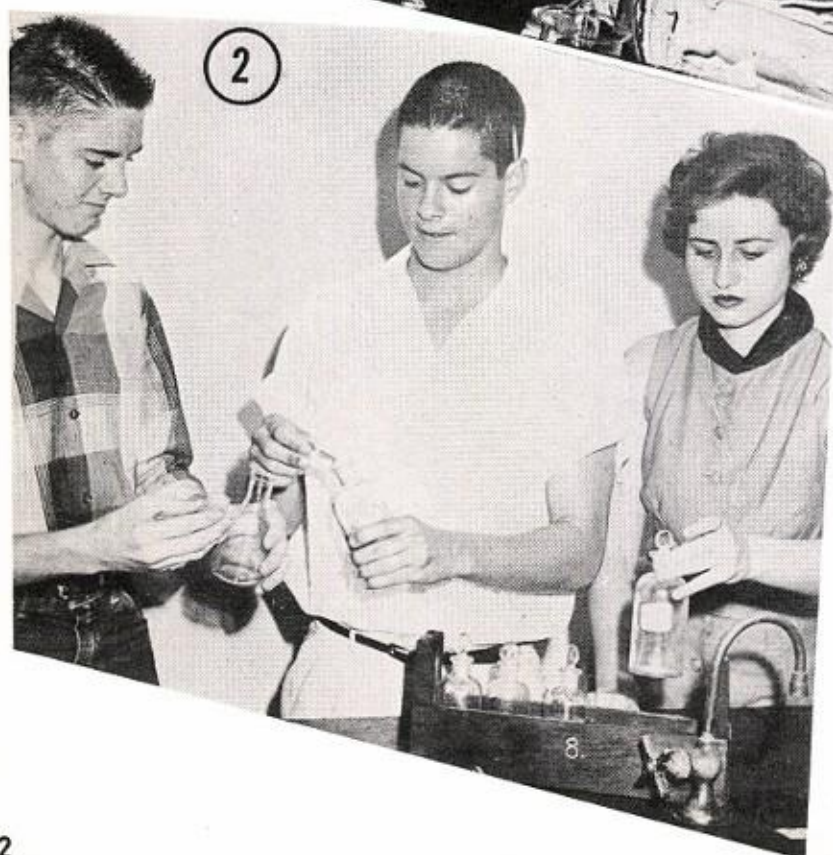

Bugology is his business, and photography is his hobby. That's Mr. Boyd, who also teaches English and supervises the Science Club. Only the faculty can remember him a few years ago when he didn't wear a mustache. But no student will forget the colored glasses he dons in hopes of discouraging cheating.

1. Kenneth Hall supervises all.

2. "A spatterin' 'o this and a pinch 'o that," decides Bobby.

3. Terrifying creatures, aren't they?

AND PROFS

Miss Sadie Gregory reigns in the chemistry lab, where she foils any attempts to turn a hydrogen experiment into a bomb. In her cozy room three flights up she personally introduces Eagles to amoebas, parasites, etc.

Famous for his love theorem, Mr. Scott coaches basketball and geometry. Sandra, his daughter, teases him about his unique pronunciation of hundred.

"K. O.'s an OK kid," summarizes Miss Officer's fan club. Aside from algebra and geometry classes, she counsels, sponsors the cheerleaders and Cheerleaders Club, helps plan the senior banquet and gives aptitude tests to the seniors.

She's a newcomer to Carter who sponsors FTA and teaches math. Her hobby is reading biographies, and her pet peeve is the student who turns his math homework in in ink. Her initials are H. H. Can you guess her name?

PROFS AND

Ex POW Mr. K. is a little man with a big wallop. When he lifts the board he means BUSINESS. His shop boys turn out some pretty nifty numbers and behave in such exemplary manner that their other teachers can't believe their eyes.

Another board happy fellow is Mr. Musick, who instructs Carterites in the use of the T-square, compass and French curves. He may sound mean, but the size of his classes proves he's well liked. Hi-Y sponsors him. Mr. Musick takes tickets at athletic games.

When not in her ROTC uniform, Miss Carrico runs a close race with Miss Pope for the honor

1. Janie Ball solves the Brink's robbery.
2. Maurice Woodsworth adds the arsenic.
3. David and Dee assemble the time bomb.

PRODUCTS

of being the best dressed teacher in school. For obvious reasons, boys aren't allowed in her sewing classes; but they won't be kept away from her kitchen.

Mrs. Parmeter came to Carter to take a stint at bookkeeping and typing. Together with Mrs. Davis they manage to keep one jump ahead of the senior Y-Teens.

In common with Miss Craig, Mrs. Travis has a street named for her. She lives on Selma. Mrs. Travis wields a wicked typewriter, a nasty pencil and a terrible alarm clock. Speedtest is her middle name.

No teacher has more interesting work than Miss Campbell. For only half a day is she required to gaze at the four walls of 219. Then she takes herself off in a new air-conditioned Buick to traipse all over town checking on her little darlings.

PRODUCTS

Another person who has family connections in the school is Mrs. Willis whose husband is child accountant. Mrs. Willis and her THINK sign occupy room 120, where both Red Cross and the Safety Council meet and Presidents are recited in two minutes — or else!

Miss B can detect and identify a piece of gum the instant it comes in the door. Her name is synonymous with five-minute tests, Aladdin coupons and picture sales. Oh, by the way, she teaches history.

Miss Pope is another dog fancier at Carter and, prize or no, she'll put her Hilda up again any of the pedigreed pooches whose handlers teach in this vicinity. Besides teaching history, she counsels, supervises the magazine peddlers and boosts the senior class.

1. They must be showing a comedy rather than a history film.
2. Why are the girls so busy and the boys so idle?
3. Miss B wanted to cut Robert out of this picture because he is holding Poly's annual.

AND PROFS

Last year it was Whittle, this year Little. He holds Bible classes two periods a day. Other teachers envy his schedule until they remember he has other more pressing pastoral duties at the Travis Avenue Baptist Church.

Mr. Charles Hoffman beats the band. This isn't to be taken literally for, actually, he just beats time to the band. To be technical, the band keeps time to his beat.

A fan of Freddie Warring, Miss Winston both attends his summer sessions and uses his music extensively. Teasingly, students like to draw conclusions from this. But whatever her means, she's got proof of good ends.

Mrs. Arista Joyner reigns supreme amid paint brushes, clay, poster paper, water colors and noisy Michelangelo's in the bud. As a hobby she practices psychoanalysis by the way a person expresses himself in his work.

Mr. Buster Dixon

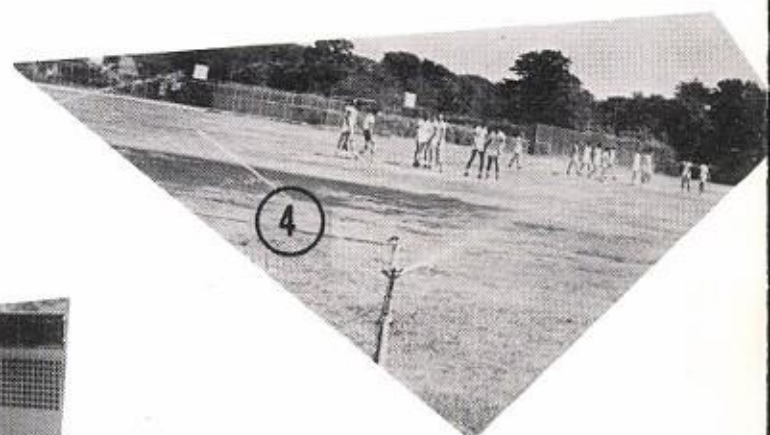

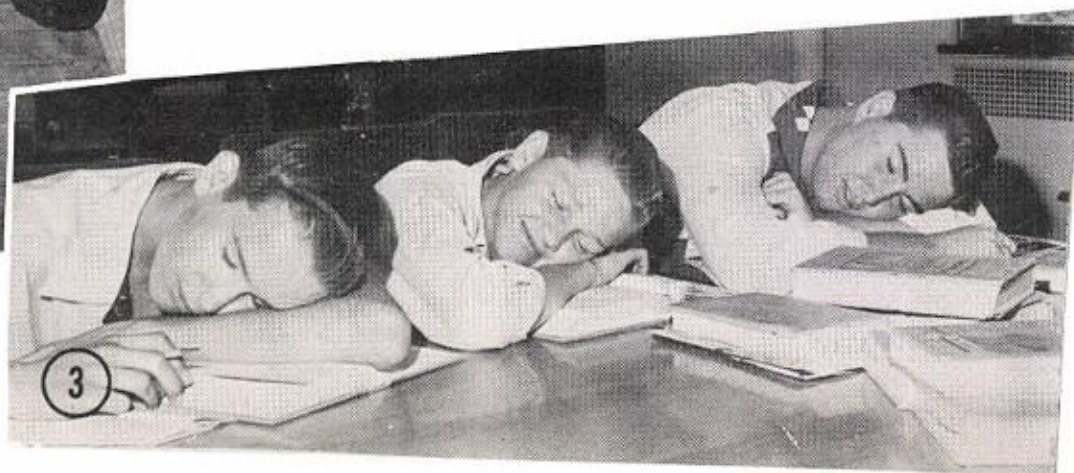

Mrs. Alma Davis

Head of the Carter corps is SFC Ray Erdman, who holds down the cleanest fort this side of Fort Bliss (ter). Despite his size "the little Dutchman" served as a paratrooper during World War II.

Arriving here from Hillsboro, Coach Dixon led the Carter eleven on to three wins in conference football—one of which was PU! Although he dreaded every pep rally speech he made, Coach Dixon was a favorite. Evidently his policy was, "Actions speak louder than words."

One of the two reasons why boys give such loyal support to the girls' PE classes is Mrs. Alma Davis. Wise ones try out for tennis just to have her for a coach. She also heads the archery team, senior Y-Teens and GAA.

1. Stephanie believes in comfort.

And Mrs. Martin is the second reason. However, boys find it a little more difficult to get her for a coach unless they register for modern dance. This is slightly impossible.

"Mr. Stein" is line coach, PE instructor and history prof at Riverside. The subject of some of Carter's most successful caricaturists' efforts, this jolly good fellow manufactures nicknames for each athlete and even refers to tests as citywides.

Best looking male pedagogue on the faculty honors go to Mr. (Dimples) Cooper, who is so versatile that he is called on to teach practically any subject and counsel besides. This year he handles math and PE (boys).

Mrs. Layton takes it all in the round of duty to distinguish between hypochondriacs seeking a few minutes respite from classes and students who are really ill.

JUNIORS

Coached by Mr. Scott, this middle-aged class is really on the ball. Managers are Tommy Terrill (president), Patsy Bourdier (veep), and Tommy Jones (secretary).

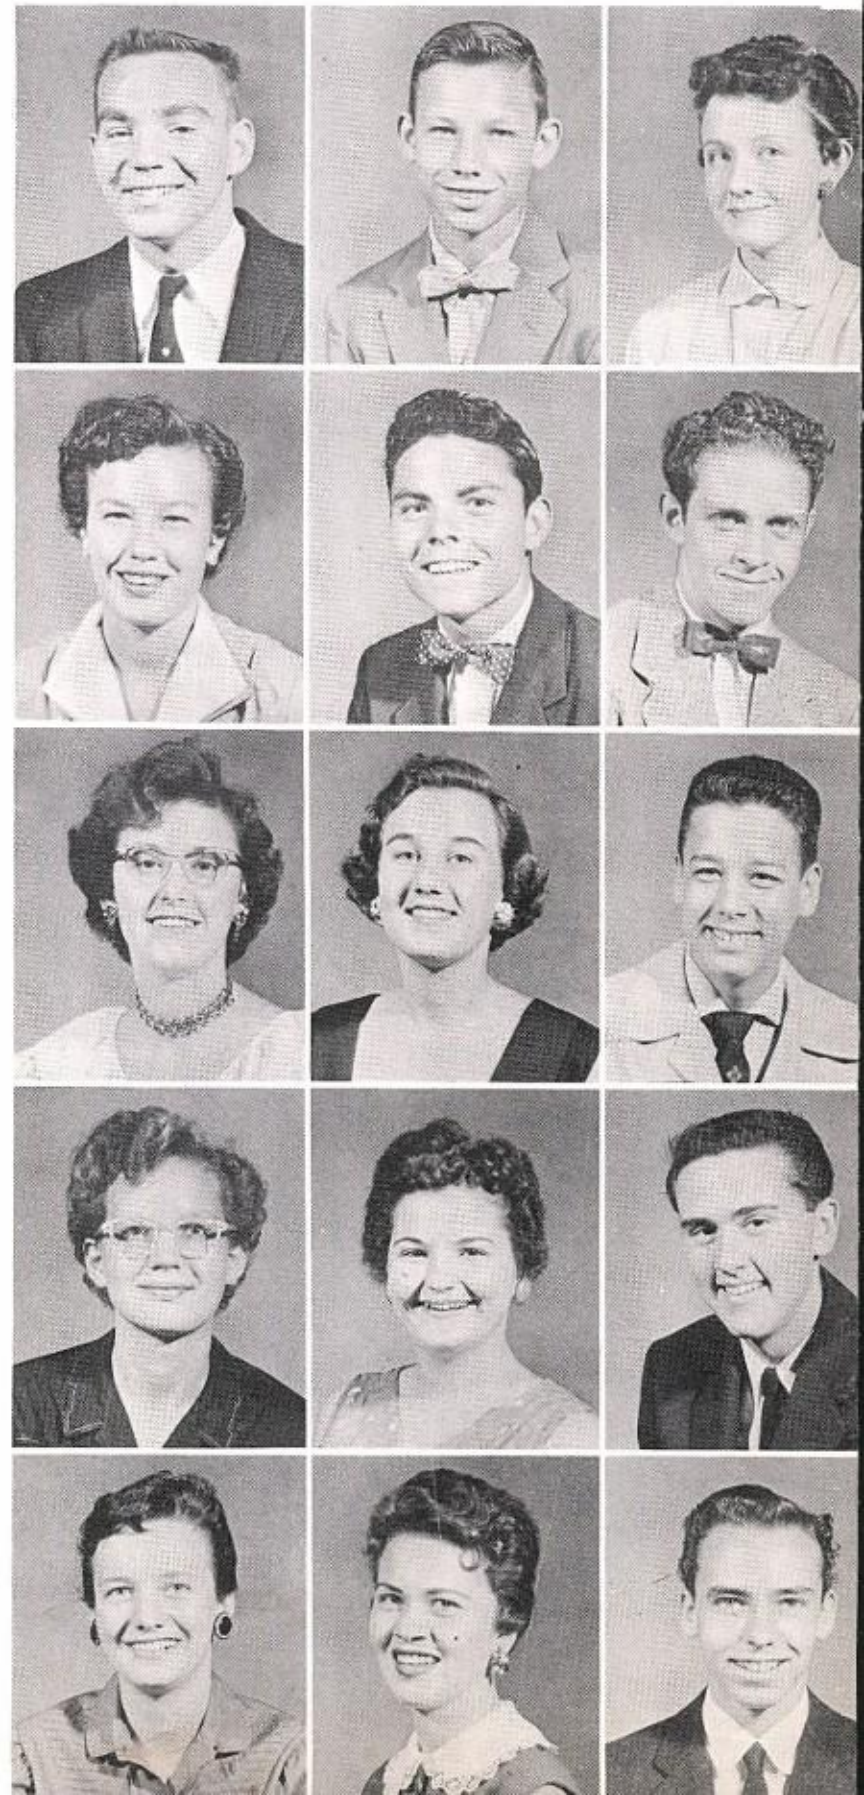

JUN

Braver souls challenged chemistry. Nearly everyone pursued a history course of some nature—even if it were just noting personal history in the form of a diary.

Their year's highlight came one spring day when they donned senior rings. Whether or not others accepted the idea of their seniority was irrelevant, immaterial, and completely out of the question. As far as they were concerned, they were now full-fledged seniors.

IORS

Ready to wield authority after suddenly discovering themselves hoisted from the lowest form of humanity—sophomores, these juniors really lorded it over their younger charges. But who wouldn't take advantage of the fact that he himself had survived those horrible, hectic fish days?

After a Battle Royal of wit and words, most of them came out on the top side of 1000 word themes. They were even victorious in bitter combat with locus theorems. And all of them mastered the art of propositioning, whether geometrically or otherwise.

Carter Riversides' senior class of '57 will be made up of the distinguished scholars whose portraits adorn these pages. And you can take them at their own words, history will be made next year—ah, yes! As a matter of fact, history has been made already. This is a most extraordinary group—handsome, too.

There's that charming couple, Tommy Bourdier and Pat Terrill—inseparable. And that old coin collector Allen Christian, whose chief object d' art dates back to the Roman Emperor Minerva in 125 AD.

Strange as it may sound to the old birds, these Eaglets at first didn't know the traffic rules and couldn't even follow their noses to the lunchroom. For the first few days they got excused tardies to class for simply explaining, "I got lost!"

Come the end of the year, 'tis predicted these new citizens will be so well assimilated that only a practiced eye can detect them from the seasoned residents of the junior and senior classes. Senior banquets would never be complete without a few renovated sophomore dates.

Sophomores proved to be a really tough problem for the upperclassmen this year. No matter how much they were trampled on, they couldn't be subdued. Once they became acquainted to the ways of the CHS pedagogues (which didn't take long), they were impossible. But even when they were slapped down, they returned it with charitable comments about the friendliness of the older students.

Y-Teens had to organize a separate branch to accommodate the enthusiastic girls. One can just Amon Carter sold advertising for the Star-Telegram "way-back-when." This is the building resulting from his early efforts. Also this is the place where the annual staff goes when they need a picture on the spur of the moment in order to make a deadline or when they can't obtain one of their own.

Latina Sodalitas Carter Scholae Altae Concilium Aquilorum appellatur. In Concilio Aquilorum multas res cum studio agemus. Quondam puella ex Africa de vita in Ethiopia nobis verba fecit. Eam magno studio audivimus.

Multa Romae nova et antiqua novimus. De patribus Romae leximus. De Bellis Galliis Caesaris legemus. Plus de cantis Virgili studemus. Studium Latinae multa dare habet.

(That was written by a second year student. Here is the translation.)

The Latin Club of Carter High School is called Council of Eagles. In the Council of Eagles, we do many interesting things. Once a girl from Africa spoke to us about life in Ethiopia. We heard her with much interest.

We have learned many things, both new and old, of Rome. We have read of the fathers of Rome. We shall read about Caesar's Gallic Wars. We shall study more about the poems of Virgil.

The study of Latin has much to offer.

Concilium Aquilorum (Council of Eagles) is the local chapter of the Junior Classical League, a national organization of first and second year Latin students. It is devoted to promoting interest in the art of literature of ancient Rome and Greece through the study of Latin. Throughout this club, Latin is recognized as an aid to clearer thought and a more varied vocabulary.

SCIENCE CLUB

In a world of atomic progress science plays a major part. It is to this strategic subject that the members of this club devote a large portion of their time. Amidst a maze of microscopes and Bunsen burners these dutiful followers of the amoeba indulge in their favorite pastime—that of scientific research.

These memorable periods are consumed by talks from distinguished persons whose vocations include the weather bureau, Texas Christian University and skilled members of said club. There are also periods of relaxation when the members fill that bulge in their intestine with such a delightful fluid as carbonic acid fruit flavored.

Cub Reporters is an organization for juniors and sophomores, who are not allowed to take Journalism. They turn in news tips to be used in the EAGLE RECORD. (Or at least they're supposed to turn in news tips. Sometimes the staff wonders when the supply runs short.) Supposedly they will work on the school paper or annual their senior year. For the present they are content with publishing the student directory, a job they took over from FTA.

During the meetings they have outside speakers or lectures from Mr. Seely. After they have mastered the lesson for the day, they create for a while. But again the staff wonders if they actually do any work, for none shows up when the paper is ready to go to press.

These bright and shiny faces are the ones found hanging around Mr. Seely's room for 1/2 credit in journalism per semester. They can actually be found working on alternate Mondays when they have a deadline for the Thursday edition. Every semester Mr. Seely makes a new resolution that there will be no unnecessary talking or walking around, and every semester he's overruled by the majority.

First semester students have study sheets to keep them occupied. During this incubation period they are supposed to learn where and what for the dictionary is. As two's (or second semester students) they design pages, assign stories, copyread, write heads, proofread, paste up pages, and prove themselves to be an awful obstacle to Mr. Seely in getting the paper out.

'56 EAGLE

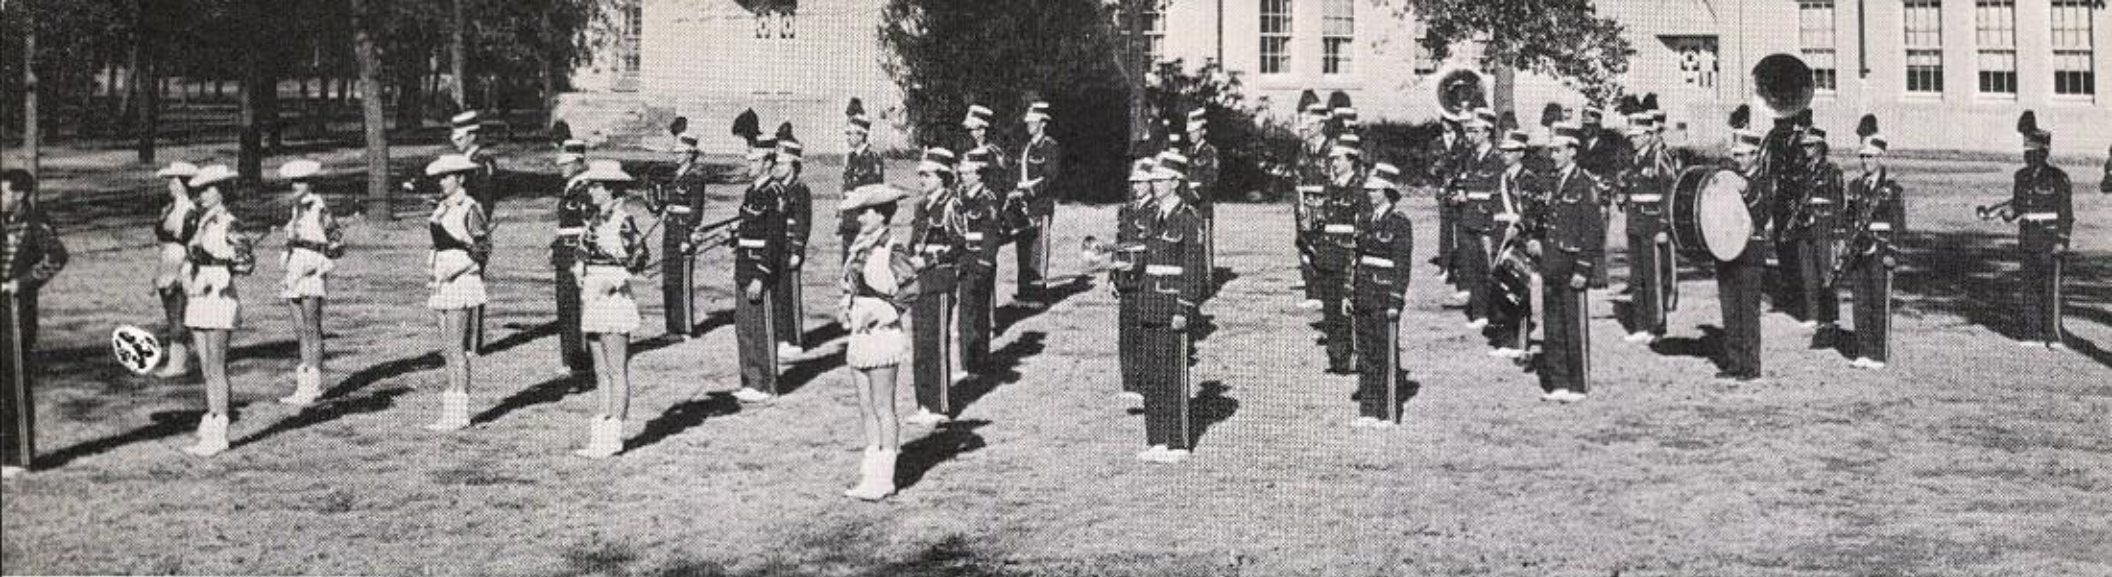

Below are the high-pressured salesmen who vended their wares of yearbooks and pictures to the home rooms. They brought in suggestions to help make this book what the school wanted.

The group above, sitting with the sun grins, is the one which did all the dirty work. It took them all summer to plan this thing and all winter to put it together. But they really had fun working on it and are proud of their handiwork.

Miss Berrong, who was busy teaching a history class when this picture was taken, handled the senior picture sales and Aladdin coupons.

The rest of the group decided what pictures went where and what copy went with each picture. But their main joy was seeing the surprised expression on the printer's face when they finally made a deadline.

Everyone has heard of song birds. But whoever heard of an eagle singing? Well, here's a group of Eagles who do sing and are justified in strutting like peacocks about the matter. Under the capable direction of Miss Edith Winston they present programs for the school, PTA, TWC, and anyone else who will listen.

Across the page is the Eagle band which struts loud and proud at the football games. They participate in competition with other school bands of the state and present programs for outside groups.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Here in the halls of CHS roam these members, humans who have stored ear to ear, hair to chin, great quantities of information such as found in tables, charts, books, and classrooms. These specialized minds join this charitable organization (charity begins in the home) by making the honor roll four consecutive weeks and filtering through a teacher's black list.

Initiations are given in the fall and spring when new members come in, take pledges, and are fed refreshments. (Where did the other clubs stray from initiations like that?)

This should be the goal of every industrious student who plunges from day to day into his studies, to emerge a new and enlightened student ready to face this troubled, hopeless, and doomed planet.

Records of the Carter-Riverside High School Library Club date back to its first meeting in 1945. Although only 14 members were present at the first club meeting in the library, the 1956 nose count brought the membership up to 26 for the fall semester.

Mrs. Alma Enis, school librarian, has been the club's sponsor from its beginning, and by her efforts every year the club is better increased in the knowledge of reading good books.

Club officers are elected from the library assistants. Each year delegates, picked from the assistants, are sent to the district meeting (in the fall) and the state meeting (in the spring) of the Teen Age Library Association. Each year a different city plays host to this group.

Here in the gym of Carter High these vibrant bits of school spirited protoplasm while away their club periods learning yells, methods of entertainment and fund raising, and the delicate art of jarring every bone and straining every muscle in a smooth, rhythmic motion to which people yell to boost their teams on to victory. (Try that sentence in one breath, smarty!)

Led by Rolinda Green, a perfect example of school spirit, these effervescent, untiring vocal cord shelters go through classes supposedly with the idea that they will be cheerleaders next year. They soon learn that the first stages of mastering this diversion of the ordinary team boosting are accompanied by various aches and pains.

DANCE CLUB

Every non-club Tuesday morning before school in the same sweat box and deep freeze as is sometimes occupied by the Cheerleader Club or athletes clad in scanties and perspiration, convenes the dance club. Here in the pre-dawn hours, addicts to rhythm shuffling, bop-hop, and cross and scoot gyrate around the gym floor talking about that boy or girl and/or "Did you hear . . . ?"

Occasionally there are professional visitors (professional in dancing) who come to these dancing bees to demonstrate new modes or styles in accomplishing same. Be it early or be it late these shufflers are content to practice the old and the new to romantic strain.

Modern youth is becoming more than ever concerned with military matters, because every young man in America faces a draft board and an obligation, an obligation that any red-blooded American does not want to evade.

In Military I, made up of ninth and tenth graders, cadets learn how to walk a'la army while balancing a rifle on one shoulder. They acquire a respect for the flag and learn not to salute with the left hand.

Military II's read maps, plan small unit tactics, and take the rifle down from their shoulders to fire it. In Military III they master teaching techniques and study more advanced weapons.

Big Brass hold a meeting. They are Colonels Edward Boyle and Travis Gerralls, Captains Herbert Byorum and Robert Brown, and Sfc. Ray Erdman.

Everyone attends the bull session at ROTC camp.

At first glance one guesses pack horses, but after studying the picture a while, he discovers that it's only Evans, Haygood and Bailey.

That was a gen-u-wine tornado that blew through rather than a bunch of boys.

Bill Hedden, a mere Pfc., has Charles Maurice, a First Lieutenant, well trained.

It was considered good psychology to wind up the section with a pleasant thought — promotions.

In this club belongs the more businesslike of Carter's brain-washed. Here, they take up the proper procedure of twisting the customer's arm, assuring the customer that the old rag left over from last Christmas rush is nothing but the latest and newest stock, and methods of p-e-r-s-o-n-a-l c-h-a-r-m which will win that much wanted raise.

These clubbers get part of their credits by being dismissed every day to work. They make the most of their club sessions by applying in practicality what they learn.

FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA

To increase and direct interest in the teaching field, Future Teachers of America was established. It introduces new subjects, ideas, and methods to the student; and gives him an opportunity to taste the situation briefly.

Practice teaching, visiting other school systems, attending conventions, and participating in the Mr. and Miss FTA contest are activities included in the program of the industrious and growing teachers of America's tomorrow.

Theirs is not always the serious outlook, because they realize the importance of play to counterbalance work. Often the meeting ends with a lively round of charades.

Certainly one of Carter's most active clubs is the Red Cross. Their goal is to help people in distress, which they do by cooperating with the national organization.

Each fall they sponsor a Red Cross drive in this school urging every student to join their ranks. To further support this, they stage a variety show in the spring combining the funds for distribution.

Spare time is given to the Red Cross center through helping with decorations and other essential matters around Christmas time. Christmas caroling is an annual affair for this busy organization.

These are the feminine sports enthusiasts who stay after school to try the proverb "practice makes perfect" in regard to their ability in sports. These girls participate in interscholastic and other district classes of sport competition.

These abilities could well be put to use if one intends to capture her man Robin Hood style or bounce a basketball off the top of his head to get attention. Also with the muscle attainable, one could help or entirely do the work of pushing his car after it has run out of gas on a lonely, dark, and moonlit road.

In today's world of high pressure and nervous tension, it's little wonder that a percentage of the public falls back on such temporary stabilizers as alcohol, narcotics, and nicotine.

It is the sole purpose of Allied Youth to bring to the youth of America the harmful and damaging effects from indulging in such habits. Contrary to popular belief, this club is not entirely composed of undesirables; rather it is constituted by a group of students who are earnestly seeking to know the truth about alcohol.

They take in such entertainment as movies, lectures, news reports, and refreshments. (Please note that this refreshment is not tampered with, but includes such appetizers as soda pop and cookies.)

TRAFFIC SAFETY COUNCIL

Organized to promote the principle of driving safety, this lively group sponsored the Driving Roadeo and sold Safe-Teens bumper stickers. It is made up of representatives from each homeroom.

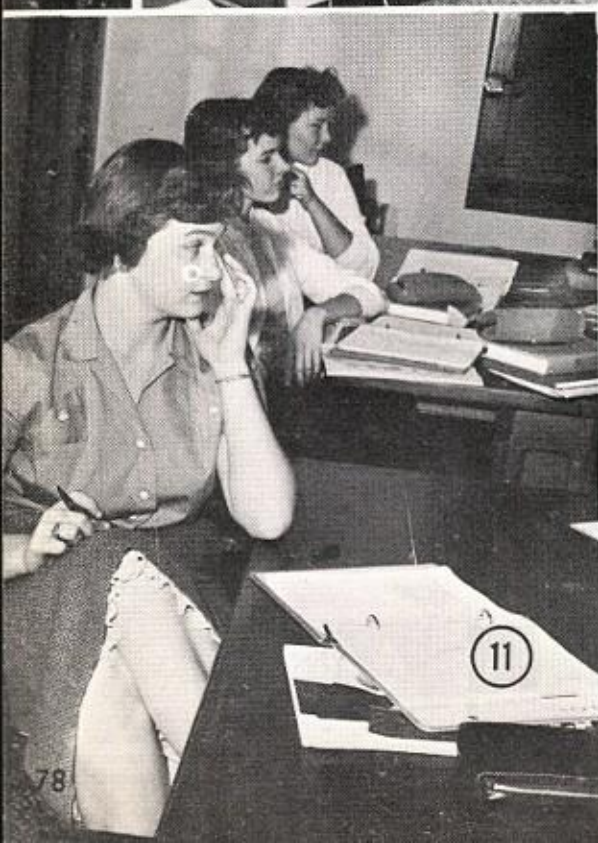

For a slight fee any student was able to buy a brilliant red bumper strip proclaiming to all the world and to dubious policemen that the "big wheel" behind the wheel was safe, if not sane. Under the controlling hand of Mrs. Willis these harnessed hot-rodders backed the contest to pick the most skilled driver.

CARTER'S

1. Claudia thinks Joyce's answer is a real dilly.
2. and 3. The dogs in picture two give Robert fleas. Of course, one might say that he's pondering a revolutionary idea, but the first explanation is the more logical.
4. Pat's beautiful from any view.
5. 2CE/R, or Claire, Elizabeth and Elizabeth divided over Ronnie.
6. Miss Campbell takes her time when coming to school.
7. Which twin has the Toni?
8. Claire gets her mug shot in for the second time on this page.
9. Girls with letter jackets are so lucky because they take up such little space in lockers.
10. One might guess that the "Rip Their Britches" sign was the brain child of Thurman Harden. Carole's so tickled that she would fall off the ladder if Billie were not holding it up.
11. Ah! Pink slips! And they're not tardy slips either!

SOCIETY

Because Amon Carter, together with his friend Will Rogers, fostered aviation, this edifice was named for him. In the early days of the airplane he arranged for a flying exhibition which was his first step to making Cowntown air-minded.

SPORTS

Amon Carter Field is not where Amon Carter Riverside Eagles kick the pigskin around. It is the Texas Christian University field of athletic prowess, for that school, too, like every other public endeavor in Fort Worth has profited by the generosity of Fort Worth's First Citizen.

During the summer this peppy group spent a week at SMU getting the know-how they exhibited before the student body. To finance their way, they sold ribbons, pins, caps and miniature megaphones. Before school they practiced; after school they put up signs; and during the school day they kept Miss Officer jumping to retain the upper hand.

GOLF

First Row: Jim Dale, Billy Rollins, Johnny Boyle.
Second Row: Jerry Gunn, Bucky Hammond.

Bucky grooves his swing.

Rollins knocked that one within two inches of the cup.

Boyle swings a mean club.

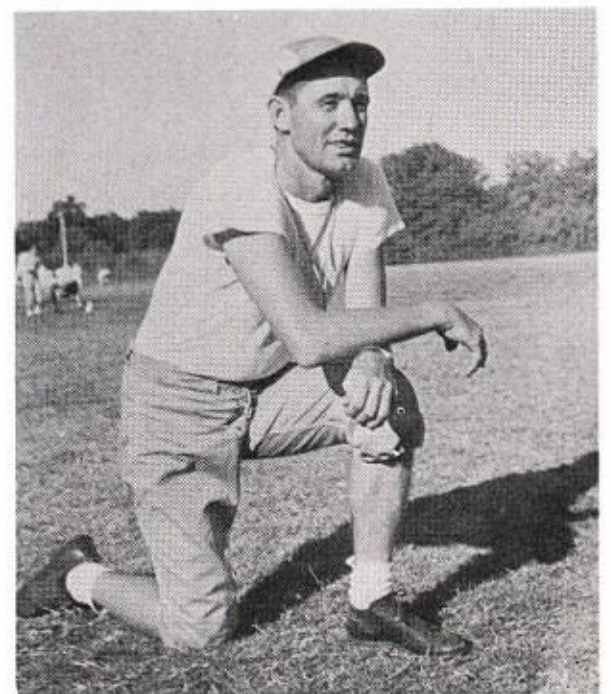

Uridil just beats Forrester to the tape.

"This way?" asks Woodworth.

Lucas can really put that shot!

Coach Cooper keeps a watchful eye on his trackmen.

TRACK MEN

3. PE is their favorite subject.

5. Roy gets on his mord.

6. This is where the basketballers hold forth.

7. They're giving their vocal cords a little exercise.

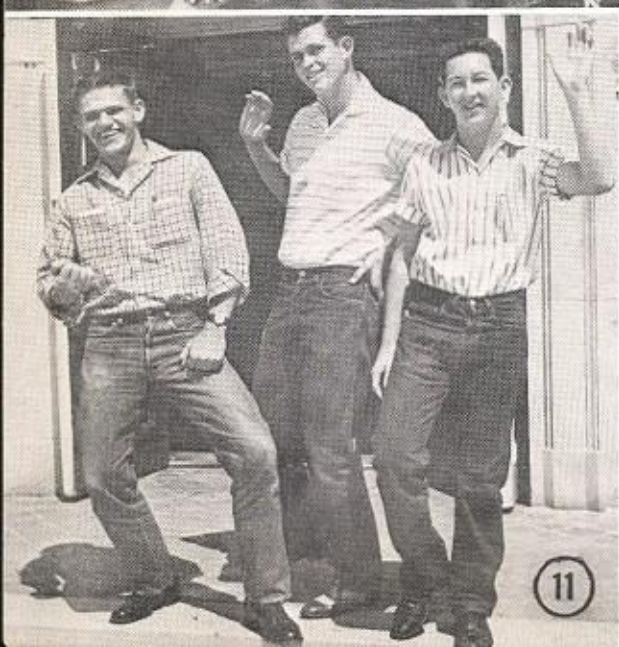

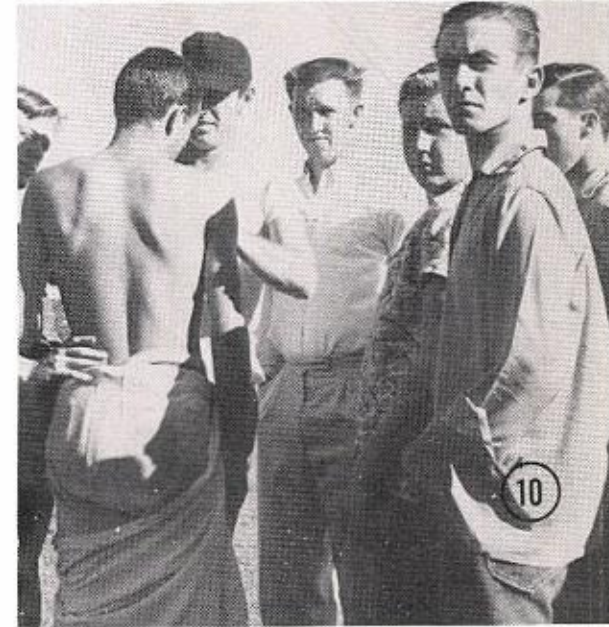

8. (The moral of this caption: If you can't say something nice, don't say anything.)

9. This cultivates grace? At least Deanna, Jennette, Jeannette, and Aloha would have you believe it.

10. It's such a gory sight that Gary, Kirkland and Robert can't bear to look.

11. Sam Thompson, Harold Hood and Bill Sprinkle (Mr. Raindrop) are products of the coach's art.

13. "Exercises, exercises! How we LOVE our exercises!"
